The International Water Technology Conference (IWTC) brings together Experts, Researchers, Equipment Manufacturers and Consultants, in order to discuss the latest state of the art in the field of water and waste-water technologies. After seventeen years of success, the Conference now aims at collecting all the multidisciplinary expertise that converge into the assessment, management and control of human-hydrological systems.

In fact, International Water Technology Conference (IWTC) offers a broad range of topics, covering different phases of the water cycle and the related knowledge, and wants to stimulate the interaction between experts having different backgrounds, including service providers and stakeholders. Due to the high impact of our activities on general water security concerns, attention will be given to water policies, regulations and emerging water security issues. The event can also be seen as an excellent trade opportunity, since most participants will be potential users and providers of equipment and services. As in the past issues of IWTC, the exhibition will offer a great opportunity to showcase activities and trends in the field of water industry.
