The WASH Futures 2016 : Pathways to universal and sustained water, sanitation and hygiene

The future of action on WASH (water, sanitation and hygiene) looks positive – with the post-2015 Sustainable Development Goals global agenda maintaining attention on the need for water, sanitation and hygiene for everyone, all the time. But the path to achieving this global agenda requires new ways of thinking.

How can all WASH actors - governments, private sectors and civil society - work together to ensure WASH, whether at community-scale or larger institutional-scale, achieve not only sustained access for everyone, but also health, well-being, and environmental and economic outcomes for societies ?

In May 2016 practitioners and professionals from civil society, governments, the private sector, donors, students and academic institutions, will come together to contribute to the broader international WASH dialogue and share knowledge with the WASH community and partners.
